Anything is Possible, is a short novel about how, in the process of scaling obstacles placed before our goals, we sometimes stumble upon the potential hidden within ourselves and others. Many of the obstacles which I grapple with in this tale are self made; others tossed in my path; while still others are those which were, in a way waiting for me to come along. In short, while motorcycling through South-East Asia in route to France I find myself waylaid by a number of unforeseen catastrophes. While I am ultimately, forced to abandon my original goal, I somehow manage to make it back to my starting point in one piece. The international setting for this adventure adds to the novel on a number of levels. Many readers will welcome a birds eye perspective of distant lands and the culture within.
