Forget driving to Route 66. The well-preserved former U.S. 80 in eastern San Diego County has all the charms of driving on an old country highway. Generally devoid of traffic, it has gentle curves with spectacular vistas in terrain ranging from high desert to mountain pines to California coastal hills. Desert View Tower is a must-see that isn't like anything on Route 66. And the freeway you take to get there isn't bad, either. It's a perfect San Diego day trip.
