Unveiling the Concepts

When we discuss Neofinalism, we are essentially exploring the potential consequences of humans surpassing their biological limitations and entering a realm of enhanced intelligence, longevity, and overall abilities. It opens up a new world of possibilities, yet raises profound questions about our traditional understanding of what it means to be human.

At its core, Neofinalism advocates for the fusion of human consciousness with advanced technologies, resulting in the emergence of wholly new entities known as "posthumans." These posthumans would possess significantly augmented intellectual faculties, allowing them to navigate complex challenges and explore uncharted territories of knowledge.

But what does this mean for our current understanding of humanity? Critics argue that the advent of Neofinalism can lead to the eradication of the human essence, as we venture into a territory where our biological limitations no longer define us. However, proponents maintain that this integration will enhance our humanity, pushing us to become more self-aware, adaptable, and interconnected.

Although little known today, Raymond Ruyer was a post–World War II French philosopher whose works and ideas were significant influences on major thinkers, including Deleuze, Guattari, and Simondon. With the publication of this translation of Neofinalism, considered by many to be Ruyer’s magnum opus, English-language readers can see at last how this seminal mind allied philosophy with science.

Unfazed by the idea of philosophy ending where science began, Ruyer elaborated a singular, nearly unclassifiable metaphysics and reactivated philosophy’s capacity to reflect on its canonical questions: What exists? How are we to account for life? What is the status of subjectivity? And how is freedom possible? Ha

Neofinalism offers a systematic and lucidly argued treatise that deploys the innovative concepts of self-survey, form, and absolute surface to shape a theory of the virtual and the transspatial. It also makes a compelling plea for a renewed appreciation of the creative activity that organizes spatiotemporal structures and makes possible the emergence of real beings in a dynamic universe.
