We're particularly thrilled to bring this issue of Travel Without Limits to you given the current state of the world and the effects of COVID-19 on business and the travel industry.

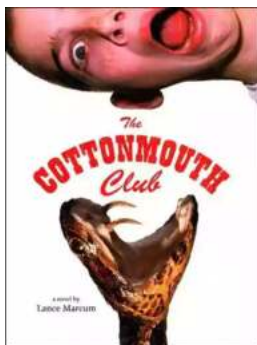

Many of the people sharing their stories in this issue have experienced life-changing accidents and share how in time they've adjusted to their disability, found new opportunities and are now thriving. When travel borders open, we know things will be different, but we too will adjust and learn to live with the new normal. And perhaps, a positive to come out of this pandemic will be that we will never take the little pleasures travel offers for granted.

As with each issue, we love to bring you a variety of stories from contributors with lived experience. Whether you're into action and adventure or prefer the slower pace of beach days we've got it covered in this bumper edition.
