A Fantastical Adventure, with a Patriotic Twist

Book Three in Andrea Rand's award-winning series that consistently asks ...

What does it take for a land to be free?

Take a Brainball, feed the web, and you will see what's being said ...

It's been twelve years since Kibblestan's Revolution, and Jenkins Jabbermeyer has just been elected count. He thinks the job will be easy, but little does he know of the evil that lies in wait for him, for the Petikins, for Kibblestan itself. When a fantastic spider web appears out of nowhere, the Petikins are enthralled with its magic. But what starts out as something exciting and mystical slowly turns into something else—something menacing and manipulative, that will aid a sinister dachshund's rise to power.

In this exciting third installment of award-winning author Andrea Rand's thrilling fantasy series, join Matilda, Philecia, and a host of characters both new and old, as they fight to preserve Kibblestan's liberty against an elusive enemy that seeks to change Kibblestan from within, gaining power in the most cunning of ways, and sacrificing innocent lives in the process.

This fast-paced, exciting series laced with themes of liberty vs. tyranny will appeal to fans of Erin Hunter's Warriors series or The Underland Chronicles by Suzanne Collins. It is also an ideal novel for book clubs or to be used in a classroom setting, as questions are provided at the end of each novel to help facilitate discussions about how the United States Constitution and America's founding principles can influence a country's freedom.
