After writing her memoir, Letters to a Young Woman, Lessons on Life and Love, from Paris, in January of 2020, Jana Marie Rose decided to write letters to young men about faith and the importance of uplifting others during challenging times, such as the Covid19 crisis. She started writing the book to give a new framework and understanding of Christianity, but as the Black Lives Matter protests developed during the spring and summer of 2020, these letters became focused on the fundamental teachings of love, rooted in the gospels of SexyJesus: Love your neighbor as yourself, and "the last shall be first." She includes scripture passages, her experiences as a teacher in diverse classrooms, yogic understandings of the New Testament, and instructions for meditation as an important discipline for centering and grounding during the complexities of the 21st Century.
