HMS Barham was a British battleship that served during World War Two and tragically sank in the Mediterranean Sea following a German submarine attack. While many lives were lost in this tragedy, it is said that the spirits of the crew members still roam the ship's remains at the bottom of the sea. Over the years, divers and individuals aboard nearby vessels reported hearing eerie sounds, phantom whispers, and inexplicable shifts in temperature. The haunting presence of the crew members serves as a chilling reminder of the sacrifices made during the war.

The Ghostly Nurse of Rorke's Drift

One of the bloodiest battles of World War Two, the Battle of Monte Grappa in Italy, claimed the lives of thousands of soldiers. Today, visitors to the site have reported hearing distant cries of agony and pain, as if the spirits of fallen soldiers are still trapped within the mountain. Witnesses have even claimed to see apparitions of soldiers, eternally reliving the horrors they experienced. The haunting echoes of Monte Grappa stand as a testament to the immense human toll of war.

World War Two had a profound impact on humanity, with its effects still being felt to this day. These ghostly tales offer a glimpse into the lingering presence of that dark era, reminding us of the sacrifices made and the price paid by countless individuals. Whether it's the mysterious whispers of Papafragas Beach or the eerie apparitions at Monte Grappa, these ghost stories serve as a poignant reminder that the echoes of war never truly vanish. As we remember the past, let us honor and respect the spirits of those who came before us.

'Huge haphazard piles of shattered furniture covered in glass and brick dust leaned towards the sky like mountains of Welsh slate – little pieces of his life were hidden underneath.' Seven-year-old Joe sits on a train Paddington Station waiting to depart, with just a cardboard suitcase and a gas mask. On the platform, he sees Nelly from next door, who doesn't get on the train. It pulls away from the station before Joe can wave goodbye. Five years later, Joe returns, looking forward to getting back to normal with his parents, but his house has been bombed, his mum has moved in with his grandparents and she's working as a clippie on the buses, while his dad, a soldier, is away fighting in Belgium.. Feeling the pinch of rationing, and lonely in a house full of adults, he visits the bombsite where his home used to be and finds Nelly sitting on the remains of the front steps. They spend every day together: Joe tells Nelly about his evacuation to Wales and Nelly helps him find things in the rubble. Overhearing his grandparents talking about Nelly, which turns his already broken world upside-down, he puts himself in danger in a quest to help her find her parents, who were killed when their house was hit by a bomb. He learns some difficult lessons about life and death in the aftermath of the Blitz.
